

Plagiarism

Cross-Disciplinary Studies in Plagiarism, Fabrication, and Falsification

Papers now being accepted for publications consideration. See www.plagiarism.org for further information about submitting manuscripts to this new scholarly journal.

Areas of Research Represented:

A refereed online journal, Plagiarism represents a wide range of research topics which address general and specific issues relating to plagiarism, fabrication, and falsification. Devoted specifically to the scholarly, cross-disciplinary study of plagiarism and related behaviors across genres of communication, Plagiarism will feature research articles and reports on discipline-specific misconduct, case studies (historical and modern; inter-/intra-lingual), legal issues, literary traditions and conceptualizations, popular genres of discourse, detection and prevention, pedagogy (cheating/academic integrity), technical reports on related phenomena, and other topics of clear relevance (i.e. mimicry, parody, pastiche) along with book reviews and responses to published articles.

www.plagiarism.org